Advice for parents of teenagers

You've always (1) brought up your children to come to you when they're in trouble. You feel it's your job to (2) look after them when they're having problems. But now, as your children are (3) growing up, they often don't want to share their problems with you. That's perfectly normal, so don't worry! Of course, you want to (4) get on well with your children, but that means you have to give them some freedom.

Maybe they've (5) fallen out with their best friend and feel upset and angry. Maybe they've just (6) split up with the boyfriend or girlfriend they've been (7) going out with. Maybe they've been (8) let down by a friend who they trusted. Teenagers go through all these problems. If they want to talk to you about it, then that's fine. But if they don't, don't force them. They'll come to you when they're ready.
